One Day Faculty Capacity Building Workshop on

"Intellectual Property Rights and Technology Enhanced Research"

1st March, 2025

Innovation means doing something new that improves a product, process or service. Many innovations can be protected through intellectual property (IP) rights. The management and commercialization of Intellectual Property (IP) is the process of taking an invention and transferring it to society in an appropriate way to ensure all the stakeholders (society, funder, inventors, and university) benefit.

Examples of IPR and Innovation:

- Patents: Protect inventions, such as new technologies or devices, incentivizing innovation in fields like medicine and electronics.
- Copyrights: Protect creative works, such as books, music, and software, encouraging innovation in the arts and entertainment industries.
- Trademarks: Protect brand names and logos, allowing companies to build brand recognition and loyalty, which can also drive innovation in marketing and product development.
